W. D. SHEPHERD FACES JURY IN POISON MYSTERY

Murder of Millionaire Orphan Will Be Exploited in Chicago Court.

CHICAGO, June 11.—Prosecutor Crowe, in the opening statement in the case of William D. Shepherd, charged with the murder of William Nelson McClintock, known as the "millionaire orphan" whose fortune he inherited by will, referred to William Darling Shepherd and his wife as "panhandlers" who lived off Emma McClintock, the murdered man's mother, for years before her mysterious death and since off her estate.

Crowe said the most Shepherd ever earned was $15 a week and declared the defendant studied chemistry in a western drug store owned by his wife and her father and in a private laboratory in a secret closet in the McClintock home at Kenilworth, on the north shore of the lake, Chicago.

Prosecutor Crowe concluded with a description of William N. McClintock's last illness after saying Shepherd learned at the National University of Sciences how to kill the youth. Shepherd, Crowe said, obtained the necessary germs from Charles C. Falman for promise of $100,000 from the McClintock estate.
